Blunts are durable, deliver a powerful high, and are hard to visually differentiate from tobacco-filled cigars. That combination makes them more convenient than joints or pipes for smokers in places that heavily criminalize the plant — especially for communities that were impacted by harsher marijuana laws and biased enforcement during the War on Drugs.

In 1993, New York native Tupac taught Snoop Dogg how to roll a blunt in California, turning Snoop off of joints forever. Today, Snoop reportedly smokes about 10 blunts per day by himself, and has said he goes through 81 per day in the past. For time's sake, Snoop employs a personal blunt roller to stay ahead of the game. (T. Eric Monroe / Triller)
